In FASHION now

Clothes that fit you properly are a must if you are to look your best. It is surprising how many women don't know their correct dress size.

Unless you have an unusual figure problem, there is a stock size that will fit you perfectly, or almost so.

Junior sizes — seven, nine, eleven, etc. — are created for the youthful figure. The lines are shorter, arm openings and neck openings are smaller.

There are styles for the small; same size lines as the junior clothes, but more mature in style.

The regular sizes — ten, twelve, fourteen, etc., are cut for the average size figure. More women fall into this group than any other. It is the most desirable group to be in, as you have a much larger choice of clothes.

Then, there is another group of sizes designed for the mature and somewhat heavy figure. Lastly, there are a number of clothes houses that design for the really stout figure.

Investigate and decide exactly what group you are in. Never buy a dress or suit which will require extensive alterations. It is always a mistake. No matter how lovely you think the dress is, remember, you will look much smarter in a dress not quite so pretty, that fits.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

Americans are living in the open more and more. The newer houses have a covered porch or uncovered terrace instead of a front porch. For this reason, more women are learning what a pleasure it is to work in the garden and are making the terrace a part of the garden.

The outdoor terrace or porch should have two essentials: be harmonious with the house and not try to compete with nearby flowers or shrubs. It should be a complement to them and a link between the house and the garden. From a functional standpoint, it should be comfortable.

Outdoor furniture is best done in solid colors or a stripe. Chairs and couches should be of the lounging sort, comfortable and easily moved about.

It is very important for outdoor furniture to be weather resistant, for when furniture becomes a burden, the terrace is no longer the pleasure it should be.

Weather - resistant furniture is made from metal, painted, certain types of reed or fiber, hickory, painted wood and redwood. Fibers which grow in marshy places are fine for furniture exposed to dampness.

Colors and fabrics must be chosen with attention to the color of the house itself. This is particularly true if your house is brick. Wicker is a natural color and blue or yellow go quite well with almost all shades of brick. Almost any bright color goes well with a white brick or clapboard house, except white, which does not show up well enough.

Fabrics should be durable ones such as: sailcloth, cotton twills, cretonne or any number of the water-proof fabrics.

Furniture on wheels is becoming quite popular and is certainly to be recommended. The barbecue grill on wheels is convenient and just as functional, some say more, as the chimney-type built of brick or stone.

FARMERS NEED TO WEAR LIME-FERTILIZER GLOVE

"Fertilizer and lime fit together like a hand in a glove, complementing each other in the soil and in crop production," says G .R. Epperson, associate agronomist of the VPI Agricultural Extension Service. Neither can function satisfactorily without the constituents of the other.

Part of the nitrogen and most of the phosphoric acid contained in fertilizer will be "tied up" or made unavailable to plants growing in a soil that is highly acid. Availability of other nutrients is also affected by soil acidity. From the opposite point of view, it would be pure folly to properly lime a soil to bring about the desirable reaction for good plant growth and not apply adequate amounts of fertilizer to supply plant needs.

Therefore, in soil fertility, we need to apply lime to promote the desired reaction or pH level, and sufficient fereilizer or matzrials to provide the plants with their need for high levels of yield, Epperson says.

How much fertilizer and lime to use depends on the kind of soil, its fertility level and reaction (pH), and the crop or chops to be grown. The results of soil analysis or soil test is an aid in estimating fertilizer and lime needs. Your County Agent can help. He has soil record sheets, sampue boxes, and shipping cartons for your use, and can help you decide on amounts and grades of fertilizer and quantity of lime to use.

VEPCO BETTER LIVING DEMONSTRATION

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC WATER HEATER

VEPCO HOME ADVISOR: In the hot old summertime, especially, an Automatic Electric Water Heater makes good company. It keeps pouring out those piping hot gallons you need for big summer washes and extra summer baths. Yet it never heats up the house through its heavy insulation.

YOU: But aren't other water heaters insulated?

HOME ADVISOR: Some are, around the storage tanks. But only an Electric Water Heater can be completely insulated all over. Because only an Electric Water Heater needs no fire, and no flue to carry off the hot combustion gases. That's why you can tuck it away anywhere. Or have it right in the kitchen or laundry next to your most-used hot water taps.

YOU: Does nearness to the taps make much difference?

HOME ADVISOR: I should say it does! A really long pipe from water heater to tap can waste hundreds of gallons of hot water a month! Better see the smart new Automatic Electric Water Heaters at your Electric Appliance Dealer's or Plumbing Contractor's soon. They're as safe and silent as electric light.
